

Kevin Kochman is the president and co-founder of KCL, the industry leader in foodservice design technologies. He developed and launched the world's first collection of foodservice design symbols from multiple manufacturers in 1985. This continues to be the most popular platform for manufacturers to widely distribute their equipment symbols while providing unparalleled efficiency for users. From this solid foundation, KCL has launched into the areas of Revit, new web technology and mobile applications. In 2019 KCL, introduced KCL NapkinSketch, the first and only application that allows reps to create foodservice designs without running a CAD or Revit program. Kevin is an original industry disruptor who is known for his forward-thinking as well as his old-fashioned customer support. With his 35 years of foodservice experience, he's seen the ups and downs of the industry and knows what it takes to move ahead.
